After the necessary biometrics preprocessing, such as segmentation and encoding, the unwrapped iris pattern image or iris code is subjected to a special non-invertible transform that allows matching in the transform domain.